

Let's save the Earth!

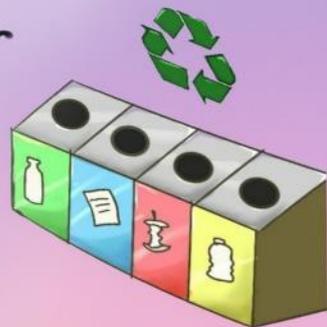

Right now, here on Earth everything is a bit chaotic. For the past few decades humans have been careless with Nature cause they don't get that without it there's no future. The global warming is probably the biggest problem on Earth.

Climate change causes a lot of trouble like melting icebergs which cause rising sea levels. Yay, more sea to swim in you'd think but no... Many animals like polar bears and seals are now losing their homes and sadly dying. It doesn't help either that about 42 000 000 trees are being cut down daily. You know, trees produce Oxygen, the thing we approximately breathe in every 5 seconds?

I think that if people continue destroying nature at this rate we're all either gonna get skin cancer or die of lack of our precious oxygen. Temperatures are already causing trouble all around the globe. Australian bushfires have already killed half a billion of wild animals like kangaroos and koalas. But don't worry, there's still time to save our planet! Even tho we maybe have a decade or three we can still fix most of the damage! We all know how much garbage there is everywhere and how it negatively effects animals. You can try picking the litter up and recycling it: plastic, paper and glass. Maybe you can consider planting a few trees, or you can help to adopt homeless animals at a shelter.

It might not be easy but it's absolutely worth the effort to try and save our home.

Hope this got through to someone who might decide and save the world!
